The ATM Industry Association (ATMIA) and Kiosks.org Association (KOA) have announced an agreement to form a partnership involving exchanging member benefits.

Craig Keefner, Executive Director of KOA, and Mike Lee, International Director of ATMIA, believe it makes good sense for two major associations in the self-service industry to work together for the mutual benefit of their members.

The agreement will involve the following features:

- Setting up weblinks on www.kiosks.org and www.atmia.com
- Member emails informing the respective memberships of the associations about key events, information, services, products, discounts, member benefits
- Reciprocal discounts offered to the two memberships
- Issuing of press releases through respective media channels in the two industry associations

ATMIA is offering to members of KOA a Partner Membership of ATMIA at a nominal $150 fee, to receive the quarterly industry newsletter, The ATMIA Post, and enjoy attendee discounts of $100 at ATMIA's trade shows, as well as permission to use the ATMIA logo in marketing material.

"The significance of this agreement," Keefner commented, " goes beyond exchange of member benefits. It is indicative of a growing overlap in the self-service industry between the kiosk and ATM sector. ATMIA members and KOA members want to know what's happening at the cutting edge of each others' industry."
